POPULATION.

Eritrea's population was estimated to be 3,135,933 in July 2000. The population increased from 2.1 million in 1975 to 3.5 million in 1998, indicating a growth rate of 2.4 percent. The estimated birth rate in 2000 was 42.71 births per 1,000, and the estimated death rate 12.3 deaths per 1,000, contributing to a 3.86 percent growth rate in 2000. The population is expected to increase to about 4.8 million by 2015. Because of drought and a war with Ethiopia, about 1 million Eritreans lived abroad (mostly in Sudan) in 2000, while at least 955,000 were internally displaced.

Military leaders:

78 Generals 568 Colonels

Major Military Units: The Eritrean army has four corps with 20 infantry brigades, one commando division, and one mechanized brigade

Defense Budget: In 1997 Eritrea's defense budget was US$88 million, or 13.6 percent of gross domestic product (GDP). Defense spending skyrocketed during the war with Ethiopia, peaking in 1999 at US$271 million, a staggering 38.5 percent of GDP. Since the 2000 cease-fire, defense spending has declined, but it remained a heavy burden in 2002 (the last year for which figures are available) at US$150 million, or 25.7 percent of GDP.

Major Military Units

Major Military Equipment: The Eritrean army has an estimated 150 main battle tanks, 40 reconnaissance vehicles, 40 armored infantry fighting and personnel vehicles, 100 pieces of towed artillery, 25 pieces of self-propelled artillery, 35 multiple rocket launchers, 100+ mortars, 200 antitank guided weapons, and 70 air-defense guns. The navy has one missile craft, seven inshore patrol boats, and three amphibious vehicles of unknown serviceability. The air force has 18 combat aircraft of unknown serviceability, including MiG-21s, MiG-23s, and MiG-29s. The air force is thought to have approximately 15 training, transport, and armed helicopters.

Military Service: National Service is compulsory for a term of 16 months, including four months of military training. Since 1998, however, military service has often been extended indefinitely for men aged 18 to 40 and childless women aged 18 to 27. In 2005 men aged 40 to 60 in the major towns were recalled for several weeks of compulsory civil defense training.

MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

Branches of the EDF

The Eritrean Defence Forces (EDF) are composed of three branches: Air Force, Army, and Navy. The Army is by far the largest, followed by the Air Force and Navy. The Commander-in-Chief of the EDF is the President of Eritrea.

The Minister of Defence oversees the EDF on a day-to-day basis.

Military service age and obligation:

18-40 years of age for male and female voluntary and compulsory military service; 16-month conscript service obligation (2006)

National service

Every able bodied man and woman is required to serve ostensibly for 1½ years. In this time they receive six months of military training and the balance is spent working on national reconstruction projects. This is outlined in both the Constitution of Eritrea and Proclamation 82 issued by the National Assembly on 1995-10-23.^[5] However, the period of enlistment may be extended during times of national crisis and the typical period of national service is considerably longer than the minimum. This program aims to compensate for Eritrea's lack of capital and to reduce dependence on foreign aid, while welding together an ethnically diverse society, half Christian and half Muslim, representing nine ethnic groups.^[6]

Military training is given at the Sawa Defence Training Centre and Kiloma Military Training Centre. Students, both male and female, are required to attend the Sawa training centre to complete the final year of their secondary education, which is integrated with their military service. If a student does not attend this period of training, he or she will not be allowed to attend university - many routes to employment also require proof of military training. However, they may be able to attend a vocational training centre, or to find work in the private sector. At the end of the 1½ year national service, a conscript can elect to stay on and become a career military officer. If the conscript elects otherwise, in theory, they may return to their civilian life but will continue to be a reservist. In practice, graduates of military service are often chosen for further national service according to their vocation - for example, teachers may be compulsorily seconded for several years to schools in an unfamiliar region of the country. According to the Government of Eritrea, "The sole objective of the National Service program is thus to cultivate capable, hardworking, and alert individuals."^[1]

The salary for National Service conscripts is typically very low. First-year conscripts are generally paid 150 Nakfa (10 dollars) per month. This rises to 500 nakfa (33 dollars) per month after the first year of service.

Location: Kiloma is located 40 kilometers south of Assab. The first question is why did the government discontinue the use of Sawa military camp? The answer is that Sawa is close to the border town of Tessenei, and the government had found that there is no effective method to reduce desertion from people who are conscripted by force. The choice of the remote Kiloma was meant to minimize desertion.

- Training: The 8-month military training consisted of long marches, requiring the conscripts to walk up to 40 kilometers per day in the harsh climate. The training is not designed to convert civilians into fighting machines but to break the spirit of a youth which daily plots to find a way to escape.
- Isolation: While at the Kiloma military camp, conscripts are not allowed to send letters to, or receive letters from, their parents. Nor are phone calls or visitations allowed for 18 months. Worried parents have absolutely no way of knowing whether their children are alive, healthy, sick, dead or have deserted. For all parents, attending the graduation ceremony was the only way to find out whether their children are alive or dead. Those who found their children were televised expressing their jubilation and serving the government's propaganda of popular participation; parents who did not find their children, estimated in the hundreds by witnesses, were blocked by armed guards and isolated so their anguish could not be televised.
- Attrition: The number of those who have been martyred includes anyone who died at Kilma, regardless of cause of death and it is certainly more than the 1 reported by government media. Those who deserted are not 18; they number in the hundreds. Still, even after this attrition number, the number of graduates is significantly over the 18,000 reported. The reason that 18,000 is cited is due to legitimate national security reasons (many governments are loathe to give the precise number of their defense forces) as well as self-deception: the government fully expects that hundreds of those who have graduated will either desert or die and wants to use that number as its baseline.

MINISTRY OF JUSTICE

Courts

Eritrea has three types of courts: civil, special, and military court.

The Military Court

The Military Court has jurisdiction over penal cases brought against members of the armed forces. It also assumes jurisdiction over crimes committed by and against the members of the armed forces. The Military Court is structured in two levels: higher and lower. The jurisdiction of these two levels depends on the seriousness of the offences in question. The higher level of the Military Court is part of the Eritrean High Court. The Military Court does not afford the right of appeal.

The Special Court

The Special Court has jurisdiction over cases involving corruption. It has the power to re-open and adjudicate cases that have already been processed through the regular criminal justice system. This court does not afford the right of counsel or appeal.

Judges in the Special Court do not have formal legal training. They are appointed by the Eritrean President and are mostly senior members of the armed forces.

The Civil Courts

1. Community Court

The Community Courts, established in 2001, have a one magistrate bench system filled by elected magistrates. They have jurisdiction over cases involving minor infractions of the law. The magistrates, who sit in community courts, do not have legal training. Unlike judges in the Zoba and High Courts, they base their decisions on the customs of the areas in which they serve. Decisions made by such courts may be appealed to Zoba Courts.

2. Zoba Court

The Zoba Court, with few exceptions, is the court of first instance. It has civil, criminal, and shari'a benches. In addition to the one judge bench system which hears all first instance cases, it has a three judge appellate bench that hears cases appealed from determinations made by the labor office on employer-employee relations. The Shari'a bench adjudicates matters of personal status of followers of Islam. Decisions rendered by any of the benches at the Zoba Court can be appealed to the appropriate benches at the High Court.

3. High Court

The High Court, with few exceptions, is an appellate court. It has three judge bench systems. These benches are the civil, criminal, commercial, and shari'a benches.

Eritrea also has a five judge bench that hears final appeals in lieu of a Supreme Court. Eritrea does not have a Supreme Court yet although the Eritrean Constitution envisages one. The final appeals panel at the High Court, which is at the same level of all other benches in the High Court, functions much like a Supreme Court does and is the bench of last resort. This bench is presided by the High Court's Chief Justice and four other judges from the other benches at the High Court.

Other Sources

1. Customary laws

Although customary law is not recognized as an official source of law in Eritrea, it plays a complementary role in the "modern legal system" through incorporation and enjoys a great deal of importance in practice. Its lack of uniformity, due to its variations along ethnic and regional lines, makes blanket customary law application impossible. It has, however, maintained its importance in the Eritrean legal system through informal incorporation in the "modern laws." For instance, while the age of majority according to the Civil Code is 18 years of age, the Civil Code also recognizes marriages between the age of 15 and 18 in recognition of Eritrean customary marriage practices. The establishment of Community Courts in 2001 with the mandate to apply customary laws is another testimony to the importance of customary law in Eritrea.

2. Shari'a Law

Although Shari'a law is not formally recognized as a source of law, it enjoys de facto status in the Eritrean legal system. It regulates issues of personal status of believers of Islam and is enforced through separate Shari'a chambers in the civil court system.

There are 36 courts in the Central region, including 6 in Asmara, 9 in semi-urban centres and 21 in rural areas.

There are 45 community magistrates in 11 sub-zones of the Anseba region at present.
