

Anthropophagus* turned maths wizard!

Granted the Amharas have success with the help of Italians and British colonial powers to break the land, Tigray and its people, and prepare the grounds for Tigrayans to be ruled under Amharas for further miseries of impoverishment, assimilation and disintegration. They used everything in the book to achieve this.

Following that, they then disparagingly call the Tigrayans/Aksumites ኣናሳ (insignificant bededome minors), who shouldn't be in high office to lead the nation; as if the Aksumites weren't one of the fourth powerful nations on earth way before the Amharas come down from the forest.

Call the Tigrayans ኣናሳ an insignificant minority who have usurped power from the Amhara somnolent masses, as if the Tigrayans haven't fought their way to extricate themselves and other exploited ethnic groups (including poor Amhara peasants and varlets/serfs) from blood-sucking parasites who know no bound of culture nor habit of hard work except to gloat over mead filled in a long-necked drinking demijohn and shredding raw meat with their naked teeth, entertaining themselves with rhetoric remarks they call ሰፎና ወርቅ. There is nothing gold in their saying except demeaning foul words.

Call the Aksumites insignificant whippersnappers as if they did not dominate the Bahare Negash, now called The Red Sea and Indian Ocean for thousands of years. The king of Aksum had Gorisom plague named after him if anyone cares to remember.

Call the Aksumites ultracrepidrian crepehangers when their mighty obelisks towered over history.

Call the Aksumites insignificant midgets, when the cities they built were buzzing with commerce long before the Amharas came down from the arboreal shelters they shared with apes.

Who invented the alphabet, the language the Amharas open their mouths to speak, the sprachgesang melodic hymn of Yared to sing? Who are they to now call Aksumites an insignificant minor without a voice.

Who in reality is the insignificant minor ኣናሳ in the region; who in reality pretends what he is not, who masquerades huffing and puffing as a wounded tiger when in fact he is a micky mouse in a chameleon's tegument atop of a loaf?

The brute imperial take over of other people's land and nations came to an end in the 1960's except for Amhara's Ethiopia. Ethiopia led by the Amhara felt it is its inalienable right to keep lands forcefully usurped from other nationalities in the name of unity and one nation when in fact there is no unity and there is no one nation but macaronic 90 ethnic nationalities shackled to the ground, serving the Amharas to their demise.

In this one nation they audaciously love to call, which no surprise, they want to keep forever, leading their comfortable lives as they know best, at the expense of others bleeding to death and/or languishing in prisons. The plight of the oppressed would not be understood by an Amhara, even if s/he tries to empathise. You have to be one of the oppressed, specially a Tigrayan to fully digest the bitter taste.

Who really is then አናሳ with no moral compass, principled endurance, but sequaciously lives to fill up his viscera with a lack of self respect? Who did sell his own domain to foreign imperial power for a scratch and then pretend to call himself as a war leader? The answer is obvious: an Amhara land grabber (lead by Menelik, Haileselassie) who clads himself with a flag for cover?

Exactly 132 years and 11 days to the day Tigray came under direct military rule of the Shewan aristocracy by design to control and disintegrate Tigrayns with active and direct collaboration of the Italians and underhanded plot of the British imperial power.

The Tigrayans once known for their commercial trade, their ship building and Metallurgical skills in minting coins even with Greek letters, their megalith buildings - a simulacrum prosopopoeia of the skyscrapers that were to become a reality millinium years later - but above all, their statesmanship. Africa has not seen again ever since they were out of the picture, once one of the four powers of the ancient world. To this day their abilities to build and craft are not totally wiped out from their vocations. From Eritrea all the way down to Moyale they still practice their smith skills with fervour no one rivals, despite the cultural and physical onslaughts they faced to undermine their trademark skills, by the do-nothing throttlebottom Amharas blatherskites.

To this day not less than at least four military bases (Machew. Kuhia, Adigrste and Adwa) were established in Tigray with the main objectives to intimidate and subjugate the people. There is no doubt the Shewan aristocrats succeeded in reducing the proud people of Tigray to poverty and dependency. The soldiers stationed at these military bases were and still are the agent of forest distruction and deforestation as they ventured to the mountains with axes and ruthlessly cut tress for fire and a source of extra cash by selling what they could carry in bundles to the market for customers on regular bases. As a boy I witnessed the wildlife in Tigray: elephants, panthers, civets and wild cats not to mention hyenas. Now they are all gone from the region, due to the destruction of the forest and their habitat. Mount Soloda now looks like a bald guy with only a trim of hair around the edge. Thanks to the Amhara soldiers who established their base right at the foot of the mountain.

No other province/region in Amhara (Beja Medir, Gotham, Wello or Showa) has had military bases except in Showa region of Beshefetu and Adama, regarded as Oromo lands (which may Aksu be perceived as posing a threat to Amhara hegemony).

There was no other institution for progress the Showan put in place. No school other than elementary schools ill-equipped not worthy of a name, no public health and no industrial projects similar what they put in Amhara regions.

Under the Showan rule Tigray was destined to starve and slowly die; and it did no doubt. They faced biblical famines every decade of the Amhara rule. As a result they depopulated and were outnumbered by the contenders. A projected estimate of the Aksumite by now would have been 97 million but now is just a tenth.

That said, supernumerary is not a blessing. Bollocks, Who says hundreds of millions of people are resources when they are sleeping empty bellies in the streets; no education; disease ridden, menacing the passers-by?

The less number of people you have the lesser the weight on the resources, to the contrary less is a blessing to feed and look after. Except you are an Amhara pseudo intellect who would want to boast to the world, "We are 120 million strong people in Africa..... Bla bla", when most are hundreds of thousands are sleeping in the street, begging for food!

And who says አኅሳ a derogatory word used by Amharas to call names to Tigrayans as the insignificant lots who shouldn't play any role in matters of governance of the nation instead of the word minority group used?

The culture of intimidation and bullying the Amhara get used to against the local oppressed has now transpired and they feel they could do the same with world powers, international organisations and media outlets to no avail. They are fools they could not learn their lesson. They keep threatening by saying that " I will not vote democrats" ... "I will not support USA against China.. bla bla" they will go on cursing and condemning instead of presenting their case why others have to support or oppose others.

Even then let us take their words, should an insignificant people as they call the Tigrayans be used and abused? Or should a minority be removed all together from being involved in matters of common interests, as the Amharas wished the Tigrayans to? Shouldn't minorities have a say on how they are led and governed? Should they be trampled upon by feudal expansionist imperial power, every time they raise their voice to oppose oppression?

Isn't democracy the rule of law and respect of an inalienable human right rather than a number game? Doesn't it mean every human group of people who are endowed with material and other psychological resources are entitled to form their self government if they choose to do so? There is no a blind rule that once you were incorporated against your will by imperial feudal expansionists in cahoots with the Italians and British imperialists for their end games, you remain forever shackled to it! No, we live in the 21st century and not in the middle ages and everyone of us has every right to go our own way if we choose to do.

Do not tell me this bullshit. Amharas are not the only imperialist, so we're also the Aksumites! Leaving governance style Aksumites practiced which was diametrically opposite to the Amhara expansionist, get this right..... Aksumites are not demanding or fighting back to restore an empire, they have left behind 1000s year back. They are now fighting for self rule not even demanding their lost land to the first Italians, then to the Askaris of Solato to the likes of Isayas Aferki otherwise Wedi Medhin Berad who grew up sipping dregs of mead left behind by inebriates.
