

Arab Fanfaronade Boulevardiers Playing with Fire!

Is limerence a pathogen, spreading like wildfire from a fomite to a contagion then back to another fomite and another contagion in a circle?

Why did the Emirates, Turkey, China and Iran fall into coup de foudre with the Amharas and defend these freebooters at the risk of being implicated in a genocide committed against the people of Tigray? The Amharas are as alien and looked down upon as inherently inferior as the Tigrayans are in the eyes of the the very same Arabs and Orientals. There are no special biological and cultural traits for the Turks, Arabs, Chinese and Iranians to reference in order to discriminate one group in favour or against the other. Why then do Amhara prerogatives get undeserved support at the expenses of Tigrayans and others in Ethiopia?

The Arabs are not known to be passionate defending anyone including their own: they are too obsessed with their own selves to care about someone else. Then one might ask why do the Amharas have such favour from inward-looking Arabs, normally busy dictating, washing and perfuming and ostensibly flaunting brummagem made abroad as their toys?

It has nothing to do with a love for the Amharas, even though the Amharas are such flatterers, they would think they could inveigle and pocket anyone, let alone the Arabs drunk with solipsism, with their honey-coated spurious praises they shower upon. In this sense we are dealing with two people at the opposite ends of the same spectrum - one who likes to be praised and admired the other who is skilled in giving praise and admiration.

The Amharas sit on a vast stolen land from computed and subjugated people and nations. But time is ticking, the world has moved away from the barbaric rules of the middle age, a period when the Amharas managed to occupy or conquer land and the people with the complicity of other imperial powers.

Nowadays it would be attempted only with use of force brought and/or purchased from such countries as the United Arab Emirates, Turkey, Iran and China. The Amhara plan indicated desperation to gain hard currency that they could use to keep the stolen land and the people controlled against their will.

The Amharas looked to the East and turned to the Middle East to gain access to arms to keep the lid closed on the oppressed people forced to live under the Amharas shibboleths, idiolects and expectations.

Likewise, Turkey, the Emirates and Iran badly need volatile nations around them in order to sell arms and extend their shore of influence.

If no such unstable country exists, if people are free to lead their lives in peace, they would not want arms to be purchased from such countries. They would rather spend their resources for development and progress than purchasing drones and weapons. But the Emirates, Turkey, Iran and China would not have a market place, so they need nations ruled by colonisers such as the Amharas and the like who would spend precious resources for such arms to maintain the oppression and subjugation of ethnic nationalities.

Middle countries such as Turkey, Emirate, Iran and China would flout international law to sell arms, they themselves produced or purchased, at much higher prices to keep their rotten economies going. Without these third parties, holding onto power would mean caducous.

Unless there are unstable and oppressive nations like Ethiopia, Turkey, Iran and the Emirates would not get lucrative trade deals to exploit resources and human skills. Some, like the Emirates, are on the lookout to obtain land to cultivate rice and oilseeds to feed their expanding population given their life in a desert and the desert is here to stay whether they like it or not.
